

Life After Berea: Vocation, Faith, and Work Workshop Agenda

Saturday, October 16, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

A Workshop for Juniors and Seniors at Berea College

"... I would encourage each of you to think about your vocation more than just your career. And there is a difference. From the outside, those two tracks may look very much alike, but asking the vocational question rather than just considering the career options will take you much deeper. The key is to ask why you might take one path instead of another--the real reasons you would do something more than just because you can. The key is to ask who you really are and want to become. It is to ask what you believe you are supposed to do." Jim Wallis, Sojourners Magazine

As a guide to our discussions today, we ask that you think about three core values that you have developed up to this point in your life:

(Note for facilitators: During the first hour we talked about including the following: What brought you here? What are some questions that you have as you think about Life After Berea? Do you have fears as well as hopes? What do the words "vocation" and "career" mean to you? Are they the same, different? Do you know people whose vocation is very different from their job/career? What personal values did you list and how did you develop these values?)
